STONENELL'S RACE AT A MILE.

Sunbeam and Connors Easily Take a First Place Finish Each.

RACE TRACK, SHEEPSHEAD BAY, June 23.—Clear, pleasant weather prevailed at the track to-day, and quite a crowd was present.

The programme was nothing to boast of, the fields being small and the class of horses entered quite ordinary.

The opening event to-day was a dash of a mile, and it proved little more than a walk for Stonenell. He was a top-heavy favorite and, rating along behind Saragosa, passed the latter at will and won hands down.

EMBEZZLED $10,000.

Cashier Cocca Played the Races with Hyman Sonn's Money.

Masquerading in a Boston Hotel as "Walton."

Arrested on a Telegram from Inspector McLaughlin.

WESTCHESTER, N. Y., June 23.—Who is the arsonist that has been setting fire to buildings in this village during the past three months and incidentally causing a small sized reign of terror?

This is the upmost question in the minds of the residents of this place, and the fact that two unoccupied buildings were fired early this morning is further proof that he or they are still in the community, and has added considerably to the feelings of insecurity.

The reward of $1,000, offered by the Town Board for the arrest of the incendiary, remains intact.

Fortunately the buildings that have been burned were unoccupied, but it is a question in the minds of many whether other dwellings will be next resorted to.

A sign posted near the fire, which was two months ago, when two sheds belonging to the Quaker Church, on the Harlem road, near the village, were burned. A couple of days later a building belonging to the Sisters of Charity, who belong to the village, was burned, and investigation proved conclusively that it was the work of an incendiary.

A week or two ago, a hotel-keeper on the Harlem road, was burned, and a few days later the Quaker Church, which was a fine building, was burned down.

The last three buildings had been bought by a Chinese laundryman and had been removed from the village, and taken to a point on the Harlem road.

Altogether it is believed that the fire had destroyed about $5,000 worth of property.

An "Evening World" reporter to-day called upon a number of residents of the village, but no one could give an opinion as to what the motive of the person or persons in burning down the buildings could be.

Altogether it is believed that the fire had destroyed about $5,000 worth of property.

Fred Lowe Answers One Who Says Lowlander's Form Was Concealed.

GARRISON SNUBS CUSHING.

Winner of the Trial Stakes Compared with Keene's Colt Hyderabad.

Fred Lowe, the owner of the Suburban winner, Lowlander, wrote to "The Evening World" to protest against what he terms the unjust criticism of a turf writer who, Lowe asserts, casts insinuations against him and his trainer, Charles Oxx, and declares that the horse's real form was concealed in the race he ran just before the Suburban.

"In the first place," writes Mr. Lowe, "he says that Lowlander was the one horse that almost every one thought did not have a chance. How can he say that when Lowlander, in his races this year, has beaten such good horses as Yorkville Belle, Diablo, the Brooklyn Handicap winner, and Sport, one of the best three-year-olds out. In the race that night-weight Kilkenny beat Lowlander, two days before the Suburban, I thought Lowlander would win in about 1.57. That was the race that convinced me that I would win the Suburban."

"I drew my conclusions this way: In the race previous to the Kilkenny race some of the best three-year-olds in training ran their mile in 1.42. Then came the race Lowlander was entered in. It had been raining in the meanwhile, and Lowlander ran the mile in 1.44. Shook up by the loss of his previous race, he was not in the best of his condition, but he ran the mile in 1.44. That was the race that convinced me that I would win the Suburban."

"Lowlander never liked mud, and judging from the race and the condition of the track, he was not in the best of his condition. He ran the mile in 1.44. That was the race that convinced me that I would win the Suburban."

The owner of Boundless yesterday telegraphed to Shapley, Garrison an offer of $5,000 if he would ride his colt in the realization. Garrison has not yet for the matter, but he is not in the best of his condition. He ran the mile in 1.44. That was the race that convinced me that I would win the Suburban."

The Morris stable yesterday declared to win with Rainbow. The knowing ones immediately went to the ring and played the horse. The horse was not in the best of his condition. He ran the mile in 1.44. That was the race that convinced me that I would win the Suburban."

"The Evening World" yesterday tipped five of the six winners at Sheepshead Bay. The horse was not in the best of his condition. He ran the mile in 1.44. That was the race that convinced me that I would win the Suburban."

The American who paid $25,000 for Medley is said to be W. H. Forbes, of New York. The horse was not in the best of his condition. He ran the mile in 1.44. That was the race that convinced me that I would win the Suburban."
